ARGUMENT OF E. W. STOUGHTON BEFORE PRESI-DENT GRANT-CLAIMS THAT THE PRISONER CAN ONLY BE TRIED FOR FORGERY-DECISION OF

JUDGE BRNEDICT IN A SIMILAR CASE, In the proceedings against Charles L. Lawrence, the President, as already reported, has directed United States District-Atterney Bliss to suspend action when the indictment for smuggling, Lawrence having been extradited for forgery, until the Solicitor-General rts as to whether or not the prisoner can be tried for the former alleged crime. E. W. Stoughton's argument, which this order is said to have been founded, dited of its legal verbiage, is as follows :

upon which this order is said to have been founded, divested of its legal verblaze, is as follows:

By the treaty of August, 1842, between Great Britain and the United States, it was acreed that they would, upon mutual requisition made, deliver up to justice all persons who, being charged with murder, or assault with intent to commit it, or piracy, or arson, or robbery, or forgery, or the utterance of forged paper, committed within the turisdiction of either, should seek an asylum or be found within the territories of the other. This treaty was simply a contract, and, although binding by force of the Constitution of the United States, required for the purpose of its practical execution the aid even in this country of statutory enactments, and in Great Britain could only be executed by means of an act or acts of Parliament. (6 Peters's Report, 734, 2 do., 314.)

Although the Constitution declares that treaties shall be the supreme law of the land, it has been held that a staints of the United States, which is in plain contradiction or clearly inconsistent with the terms of a treaty, is nevertheless binding, and must by our courts be executed. (Ropes act Clinch, S BL R., 302.) And we should be bound to give equal force to an act of Parliament if in sontravention of a treaty stipulation. Hence, if it should appear that Great Britain had, in providing by act of Parliament for the execution of the Treaty of 1842, smeeted provisions inconsistent with, or in hostility to, one or more of its stipulations, our Government, if it is almost the execution of the treaty under and by force of the provisions of such act, would be bound by the latter, and would take the benefits of the treaty, subject to ind modified by the act. I make these suggestions only to show what would be the effect of such hostile legislation of or persons charged with certain helmous crimes.

By the terms of that treaty a surrender was only to be made of persons charged with certain helmous crimes.

tion upon the stipulations of a treaty, and not recause the lectication of Great Britain is in any some hostile to the letter or spirit of the Treaty of 1842.

By the terms of that treaty a surrender was only to be made of persons charged with certain heinous crimes, and then only upon satisfactory proof. It was clearly the understanding of these two Powers that neither should obtain a surrender of persons se charged for the purpose of trying them for other than extradition crimes, see for any offense except that for which the warrant of extradition should use to the treaty does not in terms so declare: but as great nations should not suspect each other of a design to practice tricks of which an individual would be ashamed, so in this case they did not expressly declare that neither Government should not suspect each other of persons upon one charge for the fraudulent purpose of punishing them for other offenses, and perhaps for those for which no surrender could be demanded. Upon so plath a foundation does this principle rest that where witnesses have attended the courts of New-York from Connecticut, and while so attending have been served with process at the suit of one not a party to the suit in which the winess appeared, the court has nevertheless held that no jurisdiction could be obtained by means of such a proceeding. (3 Cowen's Reports, 381.) With how much greater force does the rule apply when the process is served at the suit of the very party or person who procures the attendance of the foreign witness, intending by means of such device to acquire jurisdiction over the person for other purposes. Courts of justice do not securit being because of such a proverse to be thus retryeted, nor will a great unition be guilty of a more flagrant, if not a meaner offense, by permitting its subordinates to abuse a privilege neceroded by treaty for one purpose, by we call attention to the case in hand: Charles Luce, a born subject of Great Britain, but subsey a naturalized citizen of the United States, having of for England from Canada, was demanded, une treaty of 1842, upon a charge of having forced papers, and after a hearing in London be was ited by the magistrate upon the ground that he great, within the Southern District of New-York, a or the return to the Collector of New-York of certain undise, purporting to have been executed by one Sanding, and of having also forged or wrongfully his name in the Custom-house of New-York to an entry of the merchandise so to be returned. Upon three bench warrants, used the United States, upon three several indict-ind against him in that Court, two for forgery, irongith him to the United States, or whether he had ever received any such paper or warrant; the only statement that Mooney would make being that such papers as he had in he possession he had delivered to the District-Altoney.

A decent respect for the honor of our Government and people should lead to the selection of men for a service like that performed by Mooney above the grade of low, quibbling detectives; and a proper regard for the rights of our citizens and of public duty should prevent officials from seeking to conceal, by colinsion or other unworthy devices, the charges upon which the surrender of persons under a scientification of the secondary of the papers are they have not secured that; for it not only clearly appears from the papers now submitted for what offenses Lawrence was surrendered, but it also appears not only that he is now under arrest for others, but that the purpose of the District-Attorney is to try him for these, and specially upon one charge not comprised in the treaty—limit of conspiracy and subagains.

The proceedings taken by our to-overnment to establish like charge upon which Lawrence was surrendered were sectioned y under an evolution of the section of 1870—the only act relating to the repealed. By this act of 1870—the only act relating to the repealed except that of 1873—till prior acts having out that a furtive criminal shall not write the section of the s

President to be invested with the power thus conferred upon him. He is bound to see that the treaty is fainfully executed; and if on pretext that a British subject, for instance, residing temporarily within the state of New York, had committed against the laws of that State forgery or murder, the President should demand him of the British flowersment, and on his surrender the authorities of New-York should arrest and hold and proceed to try him for other alleged offences, it would clearly be the duty of the President not to permit this until a reasonable time after the release of the person from the charge on which he was extradited, and this reasonable time is allowed by our statutes to enable the person thus surrendered to return to the country from which he was takes. And the same may be said as to any person, whether a British subject or not, for in no aspect can the treaty be regarded which does not for its fathful observance demand that any person surrendered under it shall be tried only for the crime on which such surrender was based. To arrest and imprison a per son in violation of law by means of its forms, is violence more dangerous and lawless than that which the ruffian exercises by mere brute force, without pretense of writ prevarrant; and hence it may be fairly stated that when be plain vicinition of the terms on which Lawrence was surrendered he is foreibly held on charges on which he was not, and indeed could not, be extradited, it becomes the lawless violence mentioned in the statute of 1869.

The United States is here asked to refrain from violat.

received Lawrence under the act of 1870 from the British Government, and this can only be accomplished by instructing the District-Attorney and Marshal of the Southern District of New-York neither to hold or try Lawrence upon any charges other than those on which the order of extradition was based until be has been restored, or has an opportanity of returning, to her Majesty's dominions. It is, in conclusion, respectfully suggested that, inasmuch as Lawrence is now held in close confinement upon charges other than those on which he was surrendered, and may at any time be cailed upon to plead to them for the purpose of thus obtaining a jurisdiction over him, to which he is not justly subject, your Excellency is carnestly requested to dispose of the questions on his behalf presented, at as early a day as it may be possible so to do.

and the only decision thus far from it, is said, tending to in the case of the United States against Richard B. under this decision, Lawrence has no standing which legally enables him to ask the Executive to suspend proceedings upon the indictments charging him with smug-gling, for the reason that such a request can only come that it would not be fairly dealt with if Lawrence, having been surrendered on a charge of forgery, should be tried that he had been brought within the jurisdiction of the In the treaty. Noah Davis, who was then United States District-Attorney, demurred to the plea. In sustaining Benedict said, among other things:

the demurrer, and deciding that the pica was bad, studied Benedict said, among other thinss:

The question is raised whether the facts set forth in the pica are sufficient to oust this Court of jurisdiction to try the defendant for an offense otherwise concluded to be within its cognizance. On the part of the defense, reliance is placed upon sundry cases in the tribunals of this State, which furnish, it is claimed, a support to the proposition of the defense, that this Court has jurisdiction of the person of the prisoner for a single purpose only, namely, his trial for the crime for which he was extradited. The cases referred to are civil cases, wherein the service of the warrants of arrest were set aside by the Court on motion, because it appeared that the piaintiffs, in the actions, had resorted to fraud to procure the presence of the defendants within the territorial jurisdiction of the Court, in order that he might cause them to be arrested. Such cases do not furnish a rule applicable in criminal prosecutions, nor do I find any case where a warrant of arrest of a person charged with a crime at the instance of the people has been set aside, because of deceit practiced to bring the accused within the reach of the warrant.

But, if the same rule were applicable in criminal prosecutions, and it, still actions and if the question here warrant of arrest of a person charged with a crime at the instance of the people has been set aside, because of decit practiced to bring the accused within the reach of the warrant.

But, if the same rule were applicable in criminal prosecutions and in civil actions, and if the question here arose on a motion to set aside the arrest, instead of on a pice to the jurisdiction, I am of the opinion that the relief could not be granted, for the reason that the person of the prisoner is not within the jurisdiction of the United States by virtue of any warrant issued out of this or any court. The prisoner was brought within the jurisdiction of the United States by virtue of a warrant of the Executive of a foreign government, upon the requisition of the Executive Department of the Government of the United States; and, white abuse of extradition proceedings, and want of good faith in reserting to them, doubliess constitutes a good cause of complaint between the two Governments, such complaints between the two Governments, such complaints do not form a proper subject of investigation in the courts, however much those tribunals might regret that they should have been permitted to arise. To held otherwise would, in a case like the present, permit a person accused of crime to put the Government on trial for its dealines with a foreign power. " Whether extradited in good faith or not, the prisoner, in point of fact, is within the jurisdiction of the Court, charged with a crime therein committed; and I am at a loss for even a plansible reason for holding, upon such a pica as the present one, that the Court is without sursdiction to try him. The question appears to me to be not one of jurisdiction of the Court, one to be faither on the present one, that the crime of foregry affords im a legal exemption from prosecution for other crimes by dun committed.

I may add that the case of Heilbronn, which, so far as I know, is not reported, probably affords a precedent for the action of the Government of Great Britain, upon a charge o

THE TAYLOR ESTATE.

CLAIMS AGAINST IT FROM UTICA CREDITORS AND OTHERS, AND FROM THE UNITED STATES.

The Taylor estate came yesterday before Surrogate Hutchings on the accounting of Edward H. appeal from the judgment.

Tracy, the executor of the estate of James B. Taylor, on Court of Appeals—Al behalf of himself and his co-executrix, Mrs. Taylor. The accounting was brought on by the pressure against the estate have been amounting to about Appeals—to have judgments paid amounting to about &c. defendants counsel for plant counsel, including the representatives of these final judgments. ments. Mr. Andrews appeared for the executor and executrix, and Mr. Clinton for Mrs. Kate B. Howland, the only granddaughter of Mr. Taylor, who contests the will. Mr. Clinton field objections to the accounts, and applied to remove the executor and executrix for neglect in the management of the estate.

Messrs. Wingate and Cullen presented to the Surrogate an authority from Mrs. Taylor to act for her in the mainter, individually and as executrix, and filed objections to the executor's accounts on her benaif. They also objected with Mr. Clinton to paying anything out of the estate until it was shown that there was money belonging to it which was applicable to such payment, and enough to pay all debts. That could not appear til a proper inventory was shown. Bottos P. Andrews said that, as counsel for the estate, he had advised—it being selvent—that these claims which had been settled by the court of last resort should be paid, and so save the waste of interest. As to Mrs. Taylor's new attitude, he was ready to yield the papers belonging to her separately so soon as his own account was arranged. The Surrogate said it was strongly his opinion that the debts settled and fixed by the Court of Appeals should be paid, but he would reserve his decision until to-day, when he would also decide what further steps should be taken.

Mrs. Taylor's chief objection to the accounts is that they accept the inventory made by James M. Sweeny as a collector of the personal estate as correct at $388,326 57, while she claims that $270,000 of tains was made up by giving a value to City of Brunswick stock, N. Y. Printing stock, and other such stock which was really valueless. She charges that this was done to swell the commissions of the collectors, and that it forms an unjust charge on her. She also claims that various amounts paid by the executor were improperly paid. The executor's accounts show about $270,000 of ignered claims against the estate of which about $70,000 of general claims against the estate of which about $70,000 of gen

The testator directs the annual payment to his wife during her life of $8,000 in equal half-yearly installments. The will bears date Sept. 2.1874. The lostator's wife, Henrietta B. Power, is appointed executivity, and Lewis L White and Hugh Cassady, executors. The testator's property amounts to over $500,000. that $6,000 be applied to the purchase of a plot in Cal-
